TRUE LIGHT

A PRETTY FACE DON'T MAKE NO PRETTY HEART

I still enjoy the Robert Palmer song from which these lyrics come. Bad grammar aside, they express truth: Looks can be deceiving. Jesus' words from John 7:24 come to mind, "Do not judge according to appearance, but judge with righteous judgement."

To use the common metaphor, we know that we can't always judge a book by its cover. Within academia, many expensive and valuable books come in traditional drab colors with no artwork and no curb appeal.

"A pretty face don't make no pretty heart," but neither does a pretty face indicate deceit, selfishness or treachery. We all know physically beautiful people who are just as beautiful morally and spiritually.

"We're blessed to appreciate all the beauty of God's creation, but no other beauty compares to the beauty of holiness"

On the flip side, being plain in appearance says nothing about one's heart either. We remember the famous description of the Messiah from Isaiah 53:2, "He has no form or comeliness, and when we see Him, there is no beauty that we should desire Him." As we read the gospels, it's clear that people couldn't discern the divine character of Jesus merely through His physical appearance.

"A pretty face don't make no pretty heart," but it's been my experience that a good heart and the good actions that flow from it often enhance a person's appearance. I'd never do rating scales or claim expertise, but I know that people with beautiful souls look good to me. It warms my heart to see them, whether young and vibrant or weathered and worn.

Maybe we're wise to consider accompanying statements about beauty. For example, "Beauty is in the eye of the beholder." While there may be commonalities in what most people consider beautiful, there's also a world of variation. How else do we explain who some people date or why some people buy cars and clothes in the colors and styles that they do?

To whatever degree that beauty is in the eye of the beholder, do we realize that we can choose what we consider to be beautiful? Of course, I'm thinking far more about attributes and attitudes than about physical features. When we choose to find love, joy, peace and the remaining fruit of the Spirit beautiful, we are choosing to agree with God. And we make it far easier to imitate and internalize those virtues. We're blessed to appreciate all the beauty of God's creation, but no other beauty compares to the beauty of holiness - the beauty of God Himself.
